Mr. Derek Bok
President, Harvard University
Cambridge, Massachusetts 02138

Dear Derek:

Approximately six times a year, I invite distinguished speakers to Langley to address 300 to 500 employees of the Central Intelligence Agency and other agencies of the Intelligence Community on topics of significance to intelligence. Reflecting on our recent discussions, it occurred to me that my colleagues and I would be interested in your current assessment of the American university in foreign affairs.

Particularly, what do you see as the main developments and trends in the study of foreign affairs in the universities? What post-Vietnam changes exist in the approaches of students to the study of foreign cultures, languages, and institutions? What different mind-sets do you encounter? How have university management and faculties reacted to changes and to their own perceptions of changing needs? What are the institutional relationships between American and foreign universities or governments? These are some of the questions that come to mind.

You would render us a service if you would agree to speak to us on, "The University in Foreign Affairs." The date I have in mind is Tuesday, 10 April, but we would be glad to adjust to meet your convenience. Lectures are usually scheduled from 3:00 to 4:15 p.m., including time for questions. The Guest Speaker honorarium is $500, plus round-trip air economy fare.

It would be a pleasure for all of us, and a personal one for me, to have you accept this invitation.

Yours,

STANSFIELD TURNER
